LOCATION OF CAMPUSES

Apucarana has been experiencing the value of higher education for at least 56 years. After the implementation of the State College of Economics of Apucarana (Fecea), the city administrators brainstormed and went on to meet the demands of the population, the region and several cities of Paraná, Bahia, Santa Catarina, Rio de Janeiro, Rondônia, Ceará, Minas Gerais and São Paulo by offering more undergraduate courses.

Seven of the courses, the older ones, are part of the Center for Applied Social Sciences. They are: Administration, Accounting, Computer Science, Economics, Trilingual Executive Secretary, Social Services and Tourism.

On the other hand, the Center for Humanities and Education has the newest courses for teacher training. The course of Mathematics, for example, formed the first professionals in 2015. The Education/Pedagogy and Literature courses (English, Spanish and Portuguese) have been operational since 2013.

All 12 courses totaling 1.755 students. In addition to teaching, professors develop and support the academic community involvement in research and extension projects. These actions allow the personal and professional development of academics as well as a positive impact in the community where they operate.

The College of Arts of Paraná (FAP), today called Curitiba campus II Unespar, is one of the few higher education institutions in Brazil to offer courses in various artistic disciplines. The identity and respect that it holds is due to successful graduated professionals in the Art field over a period of nearly 100 years.

Founded in 1916 by conductor Leonard Kessler as the Paraná Conservatory of Music became, in the first few years, a reference in the training of musicians in the South. However, in 2005, a new profile is drawn with the opening of the course Cinema and Audiovisual Media. The course has become one of the most representative of Brazil due to production and distribution of cinema and audiovisual works, thus projecting the name of the institution.

The campus excels in the production and dissemination of knowledge in art and offers the student the opportunity to develop skills, explore skills and produce knowledge through graduate courses and Performing Arts, Cinema and Audiovisual Media, Popular Music and Music Therapy in bachelor's level. The degrees by areas are courses in Visual Arts, Music, Theatre and Dance.

The structure is specially prepared for the development of courses offered and encouraged the student to participate in artistic and scientific activities to ensure quality training. It also helps to renew, promote and make culture accessible to the population.
